

Real detectives carry notebooks with them and write down what they find out. The book said that Fungus Detectives carry Record Sheets like the one on this page, and they write on it the answers to the clues when they find a fungus.

That's a great idea, thought Fred to himself — I'd love to do that. But he suddenly yawned! "My goodness it's almost midnight, I'd better be off to bed. I hope I can remember all of these things about fungi when I see Mrs. Brown tomorrow!"

Draw the outline shape of the fungus and write on it the colours of the parts - the cap, stem and gills.	Measure the height from the cap to the stem base	Has the fungus got gills, pores or spines	Describe the habitat - where was the fungus growing?	Which of the nine main groups does it belong to?	At home, use a book to try and find the name of the fungus
